

WHAT MANNER OF SON CAN THIS BE? By HAL COFFMAN

THE REMAINS OF MRS. C.V. SHEATLEY WERE FOUND IN THE FURNACE OF HER HOME—A SUBURB OF COLUMBUS-OHIO—CROHNER SAYS IT WAS SUICIDE—OTHERS DISAGREE.

What boy could look into the furnace of his home and there see the charred skeleton of his mother, calmly go upstairs, lie down on a couch and take a nap? Yet it is reported that is what young Clarence Sheatley did on that awful tragedy in Ohio. It seems unlikely that any woman could choose such a terrible way to take her own life, could deliberately crawl into a blazing furnace and roast and swearing in disgust when they found the door closed. They had finished their search by the time Marlborough street was reached. You at still and you won't be hurt one of the two in back said to me. Then they all got the truck, went over to a sedan parked at the curb and drove away.

General Manager Deas of the Devoted, when the hold-up was reported to him, said: "Anybody who tries to hold up one of our trucks must be crazy. At any time, they carry practically all silver, which would be hard to take away. But this truck was practically empty."

"The men were collecting in the station early with one man left on the truck. Four men, armed with guns, boarded the truck and held up the man left on it."

"The robbers drove it around the corner to Marlborough street and, finding it empty, jumped off and disappeared."

"Cholister Stone, after the Bank Bay police had seen out motorcycle officers in search of the auto bandits, went to police headquarters, where he looked over the Inspector's gallery photos in an endeavor to identify

The argument ended and the inspection. The delegation left Boston on the city steamer Michael J. Perkins. When they reached Deer Island at 11:15 the visitors found Master Malone waiting for them. The island was empty. He had dressed up for Thanksgiving.

ALL SPOKE AND SPAN
The guests and band had been raised enough. The guests had been raised up as if it had been a contest. The party went to the steamer and waited the prisoners. The men were all quiet and quiet and only three patients were there.

The smiling room was next. There the convalescents talked with prisoners. The famous bayonet had been used. Then they went to the pharmacy. There they found the walk-through. Not only one of the convalescents discovered that a truck was flying in the nose of one of the patients. A prisoner was called and the truck was removed, and men grinning on the part of both the and prisoners.

Later in the day several witnesses were to be heard in connection with the present investigation. It was brought about by the charges of Commissioner Deas.

MAN SHOT BY PEABODY BOY IS HELD FOR JURY

Peabody, Nov. 25.—(Byline) Local agent of Peabody street, Lynn, who was shot by 14-year-old John Joseph Kane of this city on October 4, was held for the grand jury in 1920 today. Louisiana told the court he was shot and had no recollection of what happened. Kane testified he was shooting in the Lynn woods when he saw Louisiana crawling through the thickets toward him. He threatened to shoot if Louisiana came nearer. The man crawled toward him and the boy fired the shot.

U. S. PROBES KILLING FOR BRITISH OFFICIALS

Washington, Nov. 25 (N.R.)—Acting for the British government, the State Department said today that it was looking into the death of Cecil D. Hodson, a British official. He was shot by Mexican bandits at Concepcion, Del Oro in October. Hodson was superintendent of the Carrizavilla mine of the Massey Copper Company, Limited. He was shot to death while he was on a train who came to his home demanding money.

LEITER CROOKS RETIRING STOLEN POLICE AUTO

November 15, signed himself as secretary of the Standard Engineering Company. He wrote on the stationery of the company which, it has since been learned, led his chauffeur in May, 1921.

Johnson was to have appeared with Knighly to explain the entire development since before the commission was on ways and drainage at the Lynn City Hall. He failed to do so. A telegram signed "William C. Johnson" was received by the Mayor of Lynn, which he would not attend because of the publicity given him in connection with the exposure of Knighly's prison record.

JOHN MISSING
Now it develops that no one can be found in Lynn who has actually seen or talked with Johnson, whom Knighly represented as being closely associated with him and possessing thorough knowledge of his plans.

William C. Johnson up to a few weeks ago was secretary to William C. Pike of Columbus, O., but Mr. Pike has made it plain that he is no longer in his employ.

WHERE IS JOHNSON?
New tales which suggested without question Knighly and his claims and plans and was based on an answer for them the question, "Who is Charles W. Knighly?" are puzzled by another one: "Who is William C. Johnson?"

Knighly's appeal before the Sausage board of yesterday, last night and outlined his plans. He stated he would carry them out, but he declined to reveal the names of the various industrial organizations which he said were interested. He said that no investment would be required from Sausage as he had factories which could do a part less complicated than Boston would finance the development.

The storm of disapproval over the linking of Knighly's name with the proposed industrial development was so severe to result in his resignation, officials protested.

Mayor McPherson is still undecided. Some members of the Lynn Council will oppose the plan. One of the startling disclosures in connection with Knighly's scheme, which they will oppose, is that he has paid in the past the bills of the motor he is to develop.

It is pointed out that if Knighly should succeed in his scheme, it would be necessary to raise the required millions by the sale of stock in a corporation. With Knighly admitting a criminal record, how could the public have confidence in the venture and invest the money if Knighly was back of the movement. Local citizens are asking.

RAY CALLED BACK HOME

It is said some confidential men moving to record their action on the motion and a half hour was used by the council to extend the trial of the case. Knighly has been in view of developments, many of the conspirators have announced a complete change of heart, and the plan to let the city have a sewage system stand.

Most throughout the country whose names were used by Knighly as he planned the scheme in the Lynn almost without exception denied ever having known the man.

JALE, SON OF MINISTER BLAME FEATHER FOR DOWNFALL

HELD HOME BY STEP-PARENT

Claims He Was Denied as a Boy the Companionship of Other Youngsters

By GRACE DESCHAMPS.
"Don't! my father always said, but he never said 'why.'"
Slim, clean-looking, candor in his face, a New England minister's son walks up and down the length of his narrow cell and wishes his father had told "why"—while a penitentiary yawns for twenty years of his life.

"I'll tell you something different when you get out of here," he said. "I'll tell you the whole story when you get out of here."
Albert L. Gross, former Brown University man and son of the Rev. Charles M. Gross, well-known Springfield, Mass., clergyman, is in the cell at the Massachusetts State Prison, Worcester, for a term of ten years for a charge of larceny.

Gross is a handsome, well-dressed young man, and in the summer spent his time in the Worcester County Jail in Worcester.

"Life has dared me since I was fourteen—and I've always taken the dare," he said. "I was a daredevil."

"Taking the dare" Gross means from a term in the Louisiana State Penitentiary two years ago when he was charged with robbing Worcester County Jail.

"I was a daredevil," he said. "I was a daredevil."

"I was a daredevil," he said. "I was a daredevil."

NEW $35,000,000 STREET PLAN

Today was "presentation day" at Welleley College, the freshmen being the participants. For the entertainment of their sisters of the upper classes they were forced to perform a play. Wearing their clothes in reverse and their shoes unfastened, the girl freshmen walked backwards into and out of buildings.

thing, just go home to bed and snicker to myself while I pictured the neighbors pouncing out who did it.

"When I went to college it was the same old story. I liked my studies, but authority hated me. There were times when things surged up in me and I wanted mightily to kick over the traces. If I had had some other chap to talk to I would have been a different person. But I didn't, and finally I got in bad and I had to leave college."

TO FIND LIFE'S ROMANCE.
"The one thing I was in wrong about, a Louisiana. When they let me go I came back to Worcester and met the only girl I needed money, but the trouble of finding it was so great I never occurred to me. So I pulled this job; planned it to be my last, and it was."

"My belief and I went out West. I was always uneasy when the baby was coming. I decided to come back to clean things up with the courts. My boy is going to be a son of a regular fellow even if I have to go back and swing to fix things."

"So I came back and my parents took my little family. Bradford Mason is my son—well, Bradford Mason isn't going to have a Puritanical father. His old man is going to play the game with him."

"When he wants to go to a pool-room, why, we'll go together! And I guess we can talk over his girls too."

"When you grow up with step-parents, you get the wrong kind of things. You think the glamour of life is all on the wrong side. But it isn't—believe me, it isn't!"

"And I'm going to pass things on for my boy and let him look inside. If the sunny things attract him, we're going to find the romance of living even if we don't go to jail any more!"

COOLIDGE CUTS NATIONAL BUDGET TO $1,800,000,000
Washington, Nov. 25.—The national budget for the next fiscal year as completed by President Coolidge and Budget Director Lord limits the ordinary government expenditures to well under $1,800,000,000. The original estimate of the cost of the military bonus law had proved too high. The small number of applicants for the insurance bonus permitted a reduction in the fund allowed for amortization purposes. Additional cuts were made also in the estimated cost of administration of the bonus law.

Message Home for Overcoat Leads to the Arrest of Man and Maud in Gem Theft

Edison, N.Y., Nov. 25.—The next time Theodore Fitzgerald feels like an overcoat to ward off the wintry blasts he will probably try a new one. This fall he wore home to Taunton from Baltimore asking an old friend to send him a coat which he had left there.

Instead of the coat the Baltimore police appeared and Fitzgerald was found himself in court here with Mrs. Alice Fitzgerald answering to a charge of larceny of nine worth of jewels and clothing from the home of Charles A. Fields in Ipswich. They pleaded not guilty and were held each in $2,000 bail.

The police had been looking for the pair for some time but no trace of them was found until the "overcoat" in Taunton tipped off the police that Theodore was skulking in Baltimore.

for the work of the customers has declined nothing wrong with the ac- counts of Oliver M. Wing, sixty-five-year-old treasurer, who shot him- self in the head Monday morning at his home here.

Wing is at the Worcester City Hospital. He is in a serious con- dition but is expected to live. He will lose the sight of one eye.

He was blown overboard and killed by the explosion of a dynamite charge at the Grafton Savings Bank, along with the cashier and acting president of the bank, who also conducted an insur- ance business.

Miss Helen Peabody's Nuptials Draw Elite of Boston Social Set

IN CLEVER MUSICAL SHOW

Society is keenly anticipating "The Ardennes," the musical show which the Junior League is putting on at the Copley Theatre next month. Among those taking part will be Miss Frances Smith, the gifted young daughter of the Joseph Landon Smith.

A GATHERING OF SOCIETY, in fashionable talk from home and abroad, was held in Grafton today.

At 1:15 Miss Helen Peabody and her sister, Mrs. Grafton Peabody, were the guests of the Rev. and Mrs. Edmond Peabody, at the home of Mrs. Peabody, who is the daughter of the late Mr. Peabody, who was the first mayor of Boston.

It was but a few days ago that the Boston Junior League gave a reception for its newly elected members at the League's new and most attractive headquarters at 100 South Street.

Good living and good form—both call for green olives at Thanksgiving

OF COURSE the expert hostess serves green olives at her Thanksgiving dinner—and on many other occasions. Well she knows their lure to appetite—the enticing, piquant flavor of each tempting bite kindles a lively desire for all the other good things to follow.

And social custom all but demands them. Not only to add a welcome touch of color to the table. But also because their presence proclaims the correctness with which the meal is prepared and served.

Green olives belong on your Thanksgiving menu. Keep a liberal supply always on hand. They're appropriate for lunch- eons, teas and suppers, as well as formal affairs. How many of the dozens of deli- cious ways of serving them do you know? Send for our new free folder of green olive recipes. A post-card will do. EDUCATION TO BE TOPIC FOR DE MOLAY

Eleven Hundred Members to Attend Conclave in Worcester This Week

Education will be the main topic of discussion at the New England convocation of the Order of De Molay, to be held at Worcester, beginning Friday, according to Melvin M. Johnson, Boston attorney.

Eleven hundred members of the order will be present at the convocation, which is to extend through Sunday. Frank C. Lamb of Kansas, the founder, will be the principal speaker at the banquet Saturday evening.

"Every parent is interested in the matter of education," said Mr. Johnson. "We want it handled directly and with sound degree of intelligence."

This subject appears in the program under the heading "The Strength of Ten." The addresses are to be given by Roy B. Dickerson, director of the department of the program and activities of the Grand Council, Dr. Zora D. Clark and others. The West will be represented at the convocation.

"The subject of sex education is all the more important, because there are no books that deal with it in an intelligent and interesting way, with one exception," said Mr. Johnson. "It is to be presented in the thirty chapters of New England in a manner to arouse their interest. I have given considerable time to this matter and I hope that this convocation will take a forward step in considering it."

DEATH OF CITY CLUB WAITER PROBED

Man Supposed to Be Charles Moss Found Lifeless in South End Hallway

Police are investigating circumstances of the death of a man thought to be Charles Moss, forty years old, a waiter employed by the Boston City Club. His body was found early today in a hallway at No. 144 West Canton street, South End.

The address is that of the headquarters of the Boston Waiters' Union and the police believe the dead man was a member of the organization. Tentative identification was effected by cards found in his pockets.

Persons who were at the union headquarters last night and during the early hours this morning will be questioned both with a view to completing the identification and also in an attempt to learn whether the man had any enemies. There was nothing to indicate what caused his death.

The body was taken to the City Hospital morgue.

Society Belles of London Wearing Gowns of Glass

London, Nov. 25.—"Heart of Night" dresses with a rainbow effect are the latest evening gowns to be worn by London society belles.

The material is covered with sequins made of glass blown to the texture of thalidomide. The thousands of prismatic particles of glass capture the colors in the light and give rainbow effects to the gown.

40-YEAR SENTENCE FACING GIRL FIREBUG

Birmingham, N. Y., Nov. 25.—Miss Frances Stale, arrested last July after she was said to have confessed setting fire to her home, was evicted of arson, this morning, today.

The offense carries with it a maximum penalty of forty years imprisonment, but liberty was recommended in the jury's report.

Miss Stale's original story was that her home had been set on fire by a burglar and that she had been smothered by the flames.

The woman confessed she set the fire, bound and gagged herself and waited for the spread of the flames. Her desire to get insurance was responsible.

GIRL THREATENS 'TO SMASH' WALES

Arraigned for Shouting Outside Prince's Residence in St. James Palace

London, Nov. 25.—Because of her shouting which to smash the face of the Prince of Wales, a young woman giving the name of Nell Gwynn was arraigned in Bow Street Court.

Police charged she created a disturbance outside Buckingham Palace yesterday.

"Why should the King have all this luxury when respectable girls are allowed to run about and starve?"

From there, they said, she went to St. James Palace, the Prince's residence, where she tried to use His Royal Highness, promising: "If I can get at him I'll smash his face."

To court she shouted out: "Why don't you tell what I asked about the Prince of Wales?"

CLIVE AT BEST IN 'CAPT. APPLEJACK'

"Capt. Applejack," a stirring drama by Walter Hackett, is this week's offering at the Capitol. The play is an exceedingly clever and well acted travesty. The audience enjoyed it immensely.

The story concerns a villainous man and his private crew, a hair-raising war with no end of comedy shown in Mr. Clive as Capt. Applejack.

A Famous Feminist Confesses that she wants what every woman really wants

3 Serials That ROYLE GIRL By Edwin Balmer

A novel which concerns that vital factor in American life of to-day: the girl who sees where she is headed, but goes on nevertheless.

The PAINTED VEIL
By W. Somerset Maugham

A novel in which the man who startled us with 'The Moon and Six Pence' and 'Rain' deals vividly and unconventionally with love after marriage.

The ANCIENT HIGHWAY
By James Oliver Curwood

A novel of love and romance in the open trails of Old Quebec.

JANE BURR has won more publicity than any woman outside "the movies." Not only has she startled her own country but she so shocked London and other European cities that crowds followed her in the streets. All because she was more advanced—or more frank—than any English-speaking woman of her day.

And now Jane Burr, feminist extraordinary, has a shock more disturbing than any she has voiced before. She says that what every woman wants is her man. And, with candor that can come only from the heart, she uses herself as an example to prove her statement.

Not so long ago such a revelation of one's innermost thoughts—and especially the innermost thoughts of a woman—had no place in the literature of the day. But now there is a magazine which wins its way by presenting the intimate, personal views of worth-while people. Not a magazine in which one may speak behind the cloak of anonymity, but a magazine in which responsible writers are glad to tell under their own names the lessons they learn from life. For instance, in the issue now on sale:

- A Widow Tells Why She Could Not Marry the Man She Loved
- A Journalist Proves that the Women Who Win Head-Lines are All Small-Town Girls
- A Jewess Mother Reveals how the Franks Case Worries Her About Her Children

Those self-revelations are important, absorbing, but emotional. But there are others that are intellectual and that are just as important to your daily life. For instance:

- A Deaf Man Tells You How to be Just as Happy as If You Heard
- A Famous Editor Tells You How and Why He Expects To go to Jail
- A Tubercular Boy Who Became World's Champion Tells How He Did It
- An Oriental Explains Why You Seem Such a Freakish Person to Him

A magazine which contains all this would be instructive, yet it might lack sparkle of entertainment. But this magazine combines with its reflection of life, the best fiction published in America. And best is used advisedly. Read its more serious pages, then compare its fiction with any other. For instance:

- The Story of a Self-Made Man—Self-Made, but What Sort of Man?—by Rex Beach
- A Story We All Can Understand, by a Favorite Author of the Younger Intellectuals
- Just an Old-Fashioned Love Story about a Girl and a Hard-Working Boy

More than enough to make any magazine distinctive. But only an indication of the contents of this totally different publication. It has, in addition, the three best serials of the day, Irvin Cobb's humor, Ray Long's philosophy, Ed Howe's views on women's pocketbooks, Sir Basil Thomson's revelations of the secrets of Scotland Yard, and other features that would be head-liners in the average publication.

CROSS WOD PUZZLE

By SeVitt

HERE is a puzzle of novel conception to add new zest to the fascination of solving twisters. It is not difficult and should prove an easy but interesting game for crossword puzzle enthusiasts. A "tip" on this puzzle will be printed in this column tomorrow. In "twister" No. 28 published yesterday No. 28 "Horizontal" was a mystery, and No. 30 "Vertical" was a goal. The synonymy, horizontal and vertical, for today's puzzle are appended. See if you can solve this twister.

MEDBURY SAYS

By John P. Medbury

AN OHIO woman was arrested the other day for being a policeman and the judge fined her ten dollars for carrying concealed weapons.

ACCORDING to that, it's against the law in Ohio to keep your mouth shut.

OF COURSE, no matter how angry she may get, a lady should never bite a stranger.

IT'S cheaper to buy a bulldog and save your teeth.

LADIES should kick, scratch and pull hair but never snap at each other.

TEETH were given to you for chewing breakfast and not for biting your friends.

THIS woman apologized to court for biting the policeman. She said she thought he was a Frenchman.

SHE was sore at the fire department because they dragged the hose across her lawn one afternoon when her house was burning.

BEAUTIFUL teeth are wonderful things, but your friends like to see them, not feel them.

AND no matter how pretty a woman may be, no man wants to marry her if she bites him.

OF COURSE if he's foot crazy about her, he could have her teeth pulled out.

SHE'd look much better that way than with a muzzle.

A HUSBAND doesn't like to put a leash on his wife every time he takes her for a walk.

AND yet he doesn't want to be embarrassed by having her snap at policemen.

OF COURSE the average woman nowadays would never think of biting her husband. If she gets sore she'd rather shoot him.

SHE wouldn't mind exhibiting the revolver in court, but she'd hate to show her teeth to a jury.

SECRETS OF HEALTH

By Charles A. L. Reed, M.D.

Former President of the American Medical Association

VERY early in the formation of what is to become your body, some special cells, those of the striped type, form together to form a little mass located in what later becomes your chest, where we called your throat.

This little mass of muscle cells is the beginning of what later becomes the larger part of your heart.

The other part of your heart begins by the formation of little scale-like structures that are attached to each other and to the little body of muscle tissue.

All of the cavities of the heart are lined by a thin membrane called the "endocardium," meaning "within the heart."

There are also within the muscular cavity of the heart certain little striped-like "columns" of muscular tissue that serve a very important purpose.

Between the cavities of the heart themselves and between them and the larger blood vessels are little valves that are likewise of extreme importance.

It will be seen by going back to the beginning of things, as we have here done, that the blood vessels are really outgrowths of the heart and therefore, are essentially parts of a system. I call it the heart system, which, as you see, consists of only of the heart but of arteries, veins and capillaries.

The heart system is the system that is concerned in carrying the blood backward and forward through your whole body.

The arteries are tubes that carry the blood from the heart and are tubes that consist of three layers, an outer layer of fibrous connective tissue, a middle layer of non-striated muscular tissue, and an inner layer of epithelial cells.

The veins are tubes that carry blood to the heart. They have a great part of the same three layers of the arteries, but the muscular layer is very thin and scanty.

The capillaries are the tiny little terminals of the arteries and veins. They consist of only one layer. It is composed of a continuous web of the internal layer of the arteries and veins.

There is not a single cubic millimeter of an inch of your body that is not reached by these capillary terminals of the blood system. The only exceptions are hard layers of the skin, the nails and enamel of the teeth.

It is important to remember that the heart system is the heart-system, and that the heart-system may be given.

A Secretary of Air in the Cabinet

The trouble with our army and navy air services is that they are just branches of the army (expert in land fighting) and the navy (expert in sea fighting).

The very able generals and admirals who command the army and navy know very little about the air service. They were thoroughly grown-up and their ideas of warfare were fixed, when the airplane developed as a fighting arm equal in importance to either army or navy.

There are generals and admirals in authority in Washington who have never been up in an airplane. A general of this type, although an able and indispensable man in his own field, is incapable of appreciating the air service or allotting to it a proper share of the fixed sum which is all that the budget director or Congress will allow the army.

When we built our railroads we did not put stage-coach owners in charge of them, nor stage-coach drivers on the locomotives. It was a new business in the world, properly handled by men brought up in that business and no other.

So with the air service. We need to establish a new department of national defense at Washington, an Air Department, with a Secretary in the Cabinet on the same footing as the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Navy. France and England have done this. The British Minister for Air controls the splendid British air fleet and allocates it to army and navy, according to their changing needs.

This would save the present overhead of duplicate army and navy air bureaus. It would centralize and make more efficient and flexible the direction of the Nation's air service.

It would elevate to its proper position the branch of national defense which most of us believe is the most important factor in the future safety of the country.

It would give the commanding officers in the air service a chance to make their own direct appeal to Congress for funds, to expand the air service out of its present tiny and inadequate dimensions.

Good Land Is Worth Money

Good Brain Much More Money

A piece of land in New York City has just been sold for $204 a square foot. That's a record for New York real estate. Let your bright little boy figure out how much all the land on earth would be worth at the same price. He has only to find out how many square feet there are in a sphere 25,000 miles around and multiply the result by $204.

Whatever the amount may prove to be, it will represent a small part of the world's total wealth. There are brains now in the cradle that in years to come will be worth to the human race billions of dollars to the square inch. What is the value, in dollars, of that fraction of a square inch in Edison's brain that did his inventing? What was the value of the thinking surface, the cortex, of Pasteur's brain? He saved billions to the grape growers, silk worm growers and brewers alone.

It is interesting to remember that thought grows on the surface of the brain, in the thin dark layer that covers it, as crops grow on the surface of the earth in the tiny layer of fertile soil, averaging in thickness not one 20,000,000th of the earth's diameter. "Let us cultivate our garden," Voltaire said. But we say, "Let us cultivate our brain." That beats farming.

But come back to real estate, and get yourself some of the right kind.

Which city will first pass New York in the value of its real estate? Will it be Chicago, Los Angeles, Seattle, Detroit, Miami, Jacksonville, or some spot that hasn't even begun its boom?

Who can tell what the flying machines and great canals making shortcuts of inland cities will do to land values in this country? It is enough to make good, single taxers shiver, sigh, and even cry "alack and well-a-day."

Hate the Trust? Surely

But Use Judgment

Fear of the gigantic trust octopus is all right as an abstract theory. But the sensible American will realize that if European industries organize on a national scale, four great nations united to control the world's steel markets, for instance, then our industrialists must be allowed to combine on a big and possible scale.

The United States Steel Corporation is the biggest single industrial organization in the world. That one company is capable of a business greater than all the steel industries of Germany combined. But no single organization is big enough to stand up in the world's markets against combinations of entire nations.

So far as the world's markets go, no individual organization, unless thoroughly backed up by its own government, is strong enough to compete with France, Germany, Belgium and Great Britain in one united steel trust for price-making and price-breaking.

We have here the coal, iron, transportation, skilled and unskilled labor. And we should not allow the world's markets to be taken from us. That's the important thing, Trust or no Trust.

Are You a Farmer

Cheer Up, Perhaps

Farmers will be glad to hear that science is close to solving the problem of supplying potato. Unlimited quantities of it exist in many States, including Texas, New Jersey, Georgia. Cheap potato from the ground and cheap nitrogen from the air will make the farmer happy—if they don't cut down the prices of his products as fertilizers drop.

MORALITY ESSENTIAL TO HAPPINESS

By DR. FRANK CRANE

GREAT intellectual powers and great artistic genius are not at all inconsistent with gross immorality. A half-dozen extraordinarily famous men could be named offhand who were moral perverts and another half-dozen were victims of drugs, to say nothing of those who never paid their debts.

Overstatement in moral teaching is fatal. Morality is not essential to winning the prizes of earth; it is essential to happiness and peace. A man may be mentally powerful and artistically creative and yet be a wretched, pitiable failure in himself.

Goldwin Smith records that when he held the chair of history at Cornell one of his colleagues was "Bulfinch, who in a remarkable way combined criminal propensities with literary tastes, being a great philologist and engaged in the invention of a universal language. Bulfinch committed a series of robberies and murders, the latter beginning with his wife and daughter. On that occasion he escaped through the absence of a corpse delict; Lake Cayuga, into which he had thrown the bodies, being undredgable."

He was finally hanged.

There is a better argument than that of incompetence, it is that of competence. The devil, from all accounts, is a very gifted and able person.

This thing we call morality is not something that inhibits the intelligence. It is not ignorance that makes us immoral. Neither does immorality reside in the instincts. We have no instinct that was not put in us by our Maker and which is not good if properly expressed.

Morality is entirely a matter of those powers in us which we call the inhibitions. That means our ability to check, regulate and direct ourselves from doing what we want to do. When we become adepts in this art we are moral. If we cannot at all do this we are riding in a cart after runaway horses, or riding in a train drawn by a locomotive in which there is no engineer. The smash-up is rather inevitable.

We speak of people going to the devil. This should not refer to people with wrong opinions or reprehensible manners. The only people who are going, slowly or rapidly, according to circumstances, but going inevitably to the devil are the people who do as they please.

THE WORLD BEHIND THE HORIZON

By Garrett P. Serviss

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

"Kludgy give some elementary information concerning the visibility of objects on the sea with respect to distance and size.—A. J. D."

"I understand that the curvature of the earth is approximately eight inches to the mile. If this is so, the further end of a straight line drawn out twenty-seven miles would be 218 inches above the surface of the sea, and the horizon would be 218 inches below the surface of the sea."

Suppose that height to have 125 feet, or 1,500 inches, then by one rule above, six times the distance squared equals 1,500, whence the distance comes out as 15.7 miles, or 25.3 miles if viewed from sea level.

But the real distance from the observer was twenty-seven miles, so the horizon must have been elevated above sea level by an amount sufficient to make the line tangent to the horizon at the observer's eye.

IF "O. Z." had made his calculation in the right way he could not have been surprised to find that the ship was visible. He ignored the essential fact that the depression of the horizon increases in proportion to the square of the distance. A straight line tangent to the sea surface is eight inches above the surface at a distance of one mile, thirty-two inches above at a distance of two miles, and so on.

At a distance of twenty-seven miles it would be the square of twenty-seven, or 729, multiplied by eight, or 5,832 inches above the sea surface. Consequently to see the hull of a ship twenty-seven miles away the observer would have to have his eye 5,832 inches above the sea. With a height of 218 inches the horizon would be 218 inches below the surface of the sea. The difference between the two heights is 5,614 inches, or 467 feet 10 inches. This is the distance between the ship and the horizon.

Over the Horizon Wall

on at twenty-seven miles, fifteen and eight-tenths of a mile and two tenths. According to our rule again, we have eleven and two-tenths squared, or 124.4, multiplied by six, which equals 746.4 inches, or 62 feet 2 inches. This is the distance between the ship and the horizon.

The foregoing complication of this disappears if we put it all in a diagram. It is evident at a glance that if the heights were the same the total distance would be divided into two equal parts, the line of sight touching the horizon exactly half way between the ship and the observer.

Every traveler may find many opportunities for interesting applications of these rules, which are deductions from the principles we have discussed.

If I take the square root of the height in feet of the observer's eye, you get approximately the distance of the horizon in miles. Thus if the height is sixteen feet, the double of this is thirty-two, whose square root is five and six-tenths.

Half the square of the distance in miles equals the height in feet. If the distance is twenty miles, half the square of that is 200, whose square root is 14.14 feet. This is the height of the eye in feet. From the deck of a ship forty feet above the water, the horizon would be about a mile and a half away.
